Breakfast and brunch should be relaxing- a meal to share with family and friends. Warm, casual, and delicious are the buzzwords for a great brunch. And fairly easy to make is a must, or a day of rest becomes a day with drudgery. The book is organized into seven main sections. Eggs, Eggs, Eggs -Author Betty Rosbottom's Eggs Benedict with New Orleans accents is a hit-replacing bland muffin with sausage studded cornbread, and the bacon with sliced tomatoes (you could just keep both, and I won't tell). With a bit of cayenne for the Hollandaise, it's a special Southern way to welcome friends. Her "best-ever scrambled eggs" is clever-she adds bits of cream cheese to give a silky texture. Nice. Want to impress your taste buds? Craft eggs baked with creme fraiche, crab and tarragon for a classic French accent. All in One- Rosbottom hits a home run with spicy shrimp and grits. I've had dozens of recipes to try, and this is near the top of my list with her creamy cheese grits, cleverly prepared the day before to save time. Hot off The Griddle- has pancakes, waffles and French Toast with eggnog, cranberries and apples. I skipped over the bread basket section- I'm not much of a baker. Fruits for All Seasons-perked my up with poached apricots and Greek yogurt with pistachios-if apricots are not around it's easy to substitute. Wine-glazed grapefruit cups are easy and pretty, with the cut sections attractively placed back in the grapefruit "shells." Breakfast Complements- The heavenly little crab cakes are to be served when my cooking "club" next meets for potluck. A caterer's dream, these truly single bite-sized treats are luscious with her mix of panko crumbs, sour cream, mustard and citrus zests. Drinks-Classic and New- Mimosas are never turned down.
